

YOUR KEY TO A COMFORTABLE SHAVE

The first step is to make sure you are using all three products as instructed, let us know if you need help here. From there, it's just technique! We're happy to help here as well.

Razor Bumps/ingrown Hairs

If you are using all three Bevel products in your shaving routine, there are just a few things we need to check on.

- 1. Are you shaving enough? If you are prone to razor bumps, we strongly suggest you allow no more than one day between shaves.
- 2. Are you shaving with the grain? This is the most common issue. We have our grain mapping guide attached with some samples and great tips on mapping out your own grain.

General Irritation or Nicks

It's extremely rare that a single blade is too aggressive. It's usually the remedy for those of us with sensitive skin! Let's make sure you've got the following covered:

- 1. Go easy on the pressure: Let the weight of the razor do the work for you.
- 2. Keep your glides short: It's common to see guys in the multi-blade commercials making quick long glides...you'll need to do just the opposite. Let's also slow it down a bit as you perfect your routine.
- 3. Avoid stretching or pulling your skin too much.

If you like, you can set up a 1 on 1 Skype, FaceTime, or Google+ video call to help get things on track.

Shaving with the grain (in the direction your hairs grow) is crucial if you are prone to ingrown hairs. Everyone's grain is different, so we've got a step-by-step guide to help you find yours!

It's best to work in sections to determine your growth pattern. You may notice each section is growing in a different direction.

Take a look at this grown pattern before hopping to the next page.

Was your guess correct?

In each section, you'll want to draw arrows that are parallel to the direction the hair is growing.

Make sure the head of the arrow is pointed with the grain and not against it.

You can confirm the arrows are pointing with the grain by using your finger or a credit card or index card to rub the hair in the direction the arrows are pointing. It should feel like you are smoothing the hairs down, this is going with the grain.

If you are lifting the hairs up, this is against the grain, and the arrows should not be pointing in this direction.

- 3. Now, fill in the remaining sections. Repeat steps 1-3 for each picture to create a complete grain map.

If you still need help after using our guide, send in some clear, close-up pictures of your own! You'll want to make sure we're able to see each individual hair clearly in order to map your grain. We recommend taking at least 5 pictures: each cheek, underneath your chin/jawline, and each side of your neck. See the examples below. We'll need these super clear in at a high resolution. Having someone else take these pictures for you is best! When done, shoot them over to us at support@getbevel.com.
